

A visit from the Buddhist Monks from the Wat Phra Singh Temple, Runcorn

Tahn Guy and Dave came to see us. They told us that Buddhist's think about nice things, are happy, and do not let other things upset them or get angry. Than Guy only owns his robe and his alms bowl. In Thailand the monks go into the community with their bowls and people give them food for the day, and other things they might need like soap and shampoo. The monks say thank you by chanting. This is to bring people health, happiness and a good life. Dave told us the story of Buddha who was a prince who did not see any sickness and suffering. One day he did see someone who was sick and decided to go out and find out about other people and to learn about life. We gave Than Guy some biscuits for his alms bowl and he chanted to us.
